The Study

More than ever before, scientific research is uncovering the fact that premature aging and disability are largely the result of the way we live. Common lifestyle factors, such as being overweight and not getting enough sleep or exercise can make people old before their time.

In a well-known study, the health practices of 7,000 people were recorded for nine years. This research revealed a clear relationship between seven basic health practices and one's risk of death. Individuals practicing all of these healthy habits lived an average of 10-12 years longer, with increased quality of life.

This report will help you discover your current health age by comparing your personal health practices with current scientific information.
